

Vital Farms Celebrated as a “Cultural Force” on Fast Company’s Annual List of Brands That Matter

Dec 22, 2023

AUSTIN, Texas, Dec. 22, 2023 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Vital Farms (Nasdaq: VITL) was recently honored for a third consecutive year on Fast Company's list of Brands that Matter. The annual list from the leading business media company recognizes brands that communicate and demonstrate purpose. Vital Farms attracts and builds trust with a loyal flock of consumers for the long-term through creative and compelling storytelling rooted in the company's purpose to improve the lives of people, animals, and the planet through food.

“Vital Farms has had the same purpose from day one, and we make decisions accordingly—big and small,” said Kathryn McKeon, CMO, Vital Farms. “It consistently means something in everything we do. That’s the secret to purpose. It has to be real. The fun part is building a brand on a foundation of a company with a true purpose.”

In Fast Company's coverage, the ethical food company was featured as a brand that is “making a cultural splash everywhere” and taking steps to influence and change culture for the better. Editors Rebecca Barker and David Salazar noted that Vital Farms earned a coveted spot on the list since it's an “industry leader when it comes to product transparency. As consumers have become increasingly conscious of animal cruelty in the factory-farming industry, the brand is standing out as a force for good.” The brand's Traceability feature that shows consumers a 360-video of the farm where their eggs were laid and its “Put an Egg on It” creative campaign that met people in the culturally conversation they were having about “egg-flation” and industry shortages, were more reasons why the brand is a cultural force.

The 165 companies and nonprofits on the 2023 list were judged by Fast Company editors on criteria including brand relevancy, cultural impact, ingenuity, and business impact.
